Top Rated by Trusted Peer Review Sites

Customer reviews matter. According to Bright Local, 84% of people trust reviews they read online as much as personal recommendations. However, there are many 3rd party review sites, some less credible than others, and it can be daunting to know where to begin. That is why it is important to gather social proof from trustworthy sources with reliable, authentic customer feedback from verified users.

Optimized for content quality and data integrity, G2 Crowd and TrustRadius are two of the most trusted review sites for business software, helping buyers make better product decisions based on unbiased and insightful reviews.

“Cornerstone is a great tool to host and deliver a wide range of learning strategies, and it has the ability to integrate learning, development and performance management. We can customize to our immediate needs and also expand with future growth.”
